

Resource Guide of Summer Opportunities for ALANA Undergraduate Students

2011

Greetings,

I am pleased to introduce the summer 2011 version of the Resource Guide of Summer Opportunities for ALANA Undergraduate Students (9th edition), a resource guide including internships, research opportunities and leadership development programs geared towards ALANA (acronym for African American, Latino/a, Asian American and Native American individuals) undergraduates. Updates and additional links are posted to the guide's website at <http://www.doorsofopportunity.org>

This edition would not have been possible without my mother, Dr. Susan Frazier-Kouassi who was determined to see it published and thus undertook all of the updates! A special thanks to those who have offered assistance and those who have given us feedback over the past nine years.

In drafting this letter, I thought of a recent personal experience. I was returning to Ghana and missed my connecting flight, as well as all other potential flights that day. I arrived in the late evening, in a foreign country with nowhere to go and no one to call. Yet, I know several people living in this city... wonderful and engaging people who I had met at conferences and meetings. However, I was out of contact and did not know how to reach any of them. One of the airline's employees went out of his way, and helped me find a guest house and transportation.

This is not an unusual story, but it reminded me of one crucial lesson – NETWORK and STAY IN CONTACT! You never know when you might be in need of someone's advice, a suggestion on an organization to look in to, a useful article, an introduction or even a sofa to sleep on for a night – or when you will be in a position to provide one (or all of these!) for someone else. Particularly for those of you users who are currently in college - meet, talk with, interact with and (most importantly, in my opinion) stay in contact with the people you meet. This ranges from peers, potential mentors, graduate students, professionals, teachers to individuals who you meet at conferences. Here's a simple tip - take advantage of opportunities to engage with people in your areas of interest, exchange email addresses and send follow up emails afterwards. You could refer to a topic discussed or share a link, an article or some information that might be of interest.

One important lesson learned since graduating from college is that it is not enough to have access to interesting opportunities like the ones in this resource guide. They may open the doors to new knowledge, skills, professional and educational options. Most importantly, however, they open doors to other people. These are individuals who are excited about some of the same questions and ideas as you are and some of whom are immersed in your fields of interest.

My challenge to those of you who find an opportunity through this resource guide (and to myself!) is to not only fully take advantage of the experiences provided, but to also identify interesting people that you want to know and learn from/with, and invest in those relationships.

If you have an interesting story to tell about the doors that this resource guide helped open for you, please share by emailing: doorsofopportunity@yahoo.com ENJOY!

Location

Varies

Dates

Varies; summer months

Eligibility Criteria

The Summer Institutes are open to junior/senior undergraduates and, in most cases, first-year graduate students from the host university or other institution. They consist of summer programs across one or, in some cases, two summers. They combine for-credit coursework and research seminars with hands-on research mentored by leading faculty in the field. Students are paid a stipend.

Description

The National Science Foundation (NSF) and the National Institute of Biomedical Imaging and Bioengineering (NIBIB) see bioengineering and bioinformatics as essential fields that underpin many other areas of science and technology in the 21st century. To increase the number of young people considering careers in bioengineering and bioinformatics at the graduate level and beyond, the two agencies have established the Bioengineering and Bioinformatics Summer Institutes (BBSI) Program. The aim of this program is to provide students majoring in the biological sciences, computer sciences, engineering, mathematics, and physical sciences with interdisciplinary bioengineering or bioinformatics research and education experiences.

Housing/ Room & Board?

Location

Various. You will select up to four Breakthrough programs from 33 sites around the country.

Dates

Summer 2011 – Eight Weeks

Eligibility Criteria

- First-year, Sophomore, Junior, or Senior college student currently enrolled in an undergraduate degree program with less than 5 years full time professional experience.
- Be between the ages of 15 and 23.
- Must be authorized to work in the US, if not one must possess work authorization

Description

“Founded in 1978 as Summerbridge, the Breakthrough Collaborative is a national educational enrichment program that annually prepares thousands of motivated, low-income middle school students for success in rigorous college preparatory programs. Drawn from the public school system, 92% of our students are students of color. English is a second language for 34% of our students, and most would be the first in their family to attend college.” As a pre-professional teaching experience, this program enables college students to obtain first-hand experience in education, and to act as role models, educators and mentors. As teachers in this program, college students teach core academic classes as well as electives, non-academic courses and “mini-courses”, which they have the ability to develop and design. The program’s ideal interns are “bright, passionate, creative and intrigued by learning and teaching—even if they are not necessarily planning to become teachers.”

Housing/Room & Board?

If the site is an out-of-town site, a homestay may be arranged. Please state your housing needs on your application.

Stipend/Salary/Other?

Stipends range from $1000 to $3300 depending on need and experience. For many teachers, the summer living allowance may pose a significant barrier to working at Breakthrough, though sites may supplement for financial aid recipients. See website for more information on Supplemental Living Allowances.

Deadline Date

Eligibility Criteria

- The City Hall Fellows program is designed primarily for recent college graduates who have not begun graduate school.
- See website for further details.

Description

The City Hall Fellows program will offer a cohort of talented future leaders an opportunity to gain hands-on experience in local government. The program is designed for recent college graduates who have not yet attended graduate school and is a one – year experience that will take place in one of several sites (may vary by year). The program will consist of two main components. One is the work placement where Fellows work as full-time staffers and support the ongoing work in the office of a senior-level city official. The second component is the Civic Leadership Development Program, a series of sessions and learning experiences, which teach Fellows about how cities and local governments function and the role of citizen involvement, thus reinforcing and complementing the experiential learning acquired through the work placement.

Various universities.

Dates

June – August 2011 for 10 Weeks.

Eligibility Criteria

- Undergraduates at a U.S. or Canadian college or university who are seriously considering graduate studies in Computer Science and Computer Engineering
- Priority given to juniors who have completed 3 years by the summer of 2011. However, freshman and sophomores with the skills needed for research, as well as seniors considering graduate school, are encouraged to apply.
- International students are eligible for the DREU program but should file the relevant paperwork to enable them to participate.

Description

The aims of Distributed Research Experiences for Undergraduates (DREU) programs is to increase the number of women from any cultural background and men from underrepresented communities undertaking graduate studies in computer science and computer engineering. Students are matched with a faculty mentor for a summer research experience at the faculty member's home institution, where they are directly involved in a research project and interact with graduate students and professors on a daily basis. The faculty members are usually from different institution than the students' home institution and this exposes participants to new research environments.

In addition to the full-time work for the research internship, every student authors a webpage to document their experience, to provide information for future DREU participants. Harvard Medical School, Brigham and Women's Hospital

Website

<http://www.fdsrp.org/>

Location

Boston, MASSACHUSETTS

Dates

June 13, to August 4, 2011

Eligibility Criteria

- Undergraduate Native Americans with a demonstrated interest in careers in medical sciences.
- Minimum 1 year of undergraduate studies completed prior to start of program (June 2011).
- NOT taking the August MCAT (the time constraints of the program do not allow adequate time for studying for this important exam).
- No previous research experience required, although one semester class of introductory science class (can include biology or chemistry) is required.

Description

Native Americans remain the most significantly underrepresented in graduate and medical education. The Four Directions Summer Research Program aims to address this disparity by choosing 10 participants each summer for an intensive medical program. This involves individualized research projects with faculty mentors (covering a wide range of interests), as well as further opportunities to explore the fields of medicine and biomedical research such as shadowing opportunities, shifts in the emergency room and first-hand operating room experience. In addition, extracurricular activities and trips are planned for program participants. Participants tend to come to the program with varied levels of research experience and differences in interest, so attempts are made by the sponsor to accommodate everyone. The mission of this project is: "to find motivated Native people and encourage them to contribute their unique talents to providing care to our people, individually through medicine, or broadly through science. Simply stated, we are Indians helping Indians."

- “Because the study of social policy benefits from a diversity of perspectives, the program particularly encourages students from minority groups underrepresented in graduate education— including those who identify as African-American, Mexican-American, Native American, or Puerto Rican—and students from low income families to apply”

Description

The purpose of this program is to introduce talented undergraduates to doctoral and career opportunities in the fields related to inequality and social policy. During this five-day program, students attend a series of seminars, workshops, panel discussions, off-site field trips and collaborative activities led by program faculty, doctoral fellows, and other social policy experts and practitioners. Faculty and doctoral fellows are drawn from a wide range of fields including Sociology, Political Economy & Government, Economics and Public Policy. Students are engaged in a short graduate-school type seminar and are encouraged to engage each other and the facilitators in dialogues about issues related to social policy and inequality, assisted by short response papers to background readings provided by the institute.

- Multi-ethnic students who have completed their undergraduate education by the start of the program (graduating seniors are eligible for this). The program is not limited to minority students: every application is reviewed on an individual basis. US citizens or permanent residents

Description

The Greenlining Academy focuses on providing hands-on experience in public policy specifically impacting low-income and minority communities, and includes two programs:

SUMMER ASSOCIATES: “The Academy Summer Associates Program is an intensive, ten-week leadership training program for multi-ethnic graduate level students who want experience working on low-income and minority economic development issues as policy analysts, advocates and community organizers.” Each participant manages or co-manages a research or advocacy project with the guidance of the Academy Director or a Program Manager. In addition, Associates attend leadership skills workshops, power lunch series, field visits; in addition to completing an oral presentation of their work at the end of the summer.

ACADEMY FELLOWSHIP: “The Academy Fellowship Program is an annual leadership training program for multi-ethnic students who have at minimum completed their undergraduate studies and want experience working on low-income and minority economic development.” Fellows work on individual project areas, under the direction of the Program Managers and Greenlining Institute Academy Director. Fellows work on one of the Institute’s program areas, conduct research; help to organize community events; interact with members of the multi-ethnic community, corporate and government leaders; write reports, articles, and position papers; and represent the Institute in public media. Fellows also attend power lunch series, leadership skills workshops and field site visits. Overall, the Academy is distinct in that it “is designed to give students hands-on opportunities to manage research, community education and advocacy projects.”

Housing/ Room & Board?

Housing not provided. Note “The Greenlining Institute is unable to provide assistance in finding or securing housing in the Bay Area.”

Eligibility Criteria

Eligibility criteria for both programs:

- College sophomores, juniors, seniors, or recent graduates (since May 2006) from any accredited four-year college or university in the United States are eligible to apply, irrespective of nationality
- “Fellows will be selected on the basis of interest in minority issues, evidence of leadership potential, academic achievement, and demonstrated commitment to human rights”

Description

In general, “HIA has multiple goals: to explore the relationship of minority issues to the broad field of human rights; to reinforce the Fellows’ commitment to the improvement of human rights, especially the protection of vulnerable minorities; to encourage American and European university students to become leaders in these fields; to strengthen their commitment to democratic values; and to foster an ever growing international community of people with similar concerns and commitments.”

HIA European Core Program: Bringing together students from the U.S. and several European countries, the purpose of this program focuses on exploring three key areas: Current human rights and minority issues in the host countries; the development of international human rights institutions and doctrines post-World War II and the Holocaust; and resistance to the Holocaust. This program include lectures, seminars, fieldwork by participants, site visits, written and oral reports, as well as outreach work upon return to the U.S.

HIA American Core Program: Participants from the U.S., Denmark, France, Germany, the Netherlands and Poland, will “study the legal, cultural, religious, and political conditions that promote, regulate, and threaten diversity in the United States” through an educational program addressing the historical significance of slavery, segregation, and immigration in the U.S. and contemporary topics of race and ethnicity, the criminal justice system, immigration, religion, and civil society in the U.S. Following the summer component, the U.S. Fellows will undertake internships in Berlin, in governmental and non-governmental organizations focused on minority issues, human rights, and transatlantic relations (proficiency in the German language is helpful but not required).

- Minimum 3.2 GPA (on 4.0-scale); Strong interest and plans for graduate study in international affairs
- U.S. citizen or permanent resident (documentation required); Underrepresented minority defined as African American, Hispanic/Latino American, American Indian, Asian American, Alaskan Native, Native Hawaiian, or Pacific Islander

Description

Students are recruited from across the nation and apply as sophomores to participate in a five-year sequence of summer policy institutes, study abroad, intensive language training, internships, and graduate study.

Part I: Sophomore Summer Policy Institute (SSPI) at Spelman College: 8 week program with coursework in International Politics, Research Methods, U.S. Foreign Policy, International Business, Economics, and selected area studies, supplemented by a “writing across the curriculum” component to strengthen and development IIPP Fellows’ writing and analytical skills.

Part II: Junior Year Study abroad: Fellows study for 1-2 semesters at an approved overseas institution. The IIPP provides funding for as much as one-half of the total cost of study abroad, with the unmet half being covered by a combination of government and institutional aid, as well as some reasonable family contribution.

Part III: Summer Language Institute: Intensive summer language-training after senior year for those without language competency. Fellows are strongly encouraged to take up less commonly studied languages. Fellows attend summer language programs such as Middlebury College’s SLI. IIPP covers the costs of travel to and from the SLI, tuition, room and board, and a modest stipend (or alternative summer language program)

Part IV: Fellows attend the Junior Summer Policy Institute (JSPI) at the University of Maryland during the summer after the junior year, intended to prepare students for graduate study/work in international affairs.

Part V: Fellows who have established language competency participate in a summer internship experience in lieu of intensive language training during the summer following the senior year. For some who opt to defer graduate school for one year, the internship may span the fall and spring semesters as well, providing valuable job experience that strengthens graduate school applications and bolsters professional credentials. IIPP provides a modest cost of living stipend.

Part VI: Fellows who successfully complete each component of their respective fellowship sequences are eligible to receive graduate fellowship assistance for a master’s degree in an international affairs-related field. Institutional members of the Association of Professional Schools of International Affairs (APSIA), as partners in the IIPP effort, provide matching fellowship support as available.

Pre-Law Summer Institute for American Indians and Alaska Natives (PLSI)

Sponsor

American Indian Law Center, Inc.

Website

<http://ailc-inc.org/PLSI.htm>

Location

Albuquerque, NEW MEXICO

Dates

June 1st – July 29th, 2011

Eligibility Criteria

- American Indian and Alaskan prospective law students – must be able to demonstrate application to at least one ABA-accredited law school, and submit LSDAS Master Law School Report (the sheet with your undergraduate grade summary), and a copy of LSAT Candidate Report along with applications
- Must submit “Proof of membership in a state- or federally-recognized tribe. If you are not enrolled, but have a blood quantum of ¼ or more, please provide that documentation, along with an explanation of why you are not enrolled.”

NB: Applicant should carefully review the “Who Should Attend” section: <http://law.school.unm.edu/ailc/plsi/who-should-attend.php>

Description

This program is “an intensive two-month program which prepares American Indian and Alaska Native individuals for the rigors of law school by essentially replicating the first semester of law school. Likened to boot camp by many former participants, the PLSI concentrates its content into eight weeks of instruction, research and study, teaching students the unique methods of law school research, analysis, and writing.” Specifically, the program is a significant academic commitment as “the course load consists of three substantive law courses, including Indian Law, Torts/Legal Process and one other core curriculum subject which varies from year to year. Participants also will be enrolled in an advocacy course in which they will prepare a complete moot appellate court case including the writing of legal memoranda and briefs, and presenting an oral argument at the end of the two months.”

Housing/ Room & Board?

The PLSI does not provide housing, meals, transportation, household items or school supplies. The PLSI living allowance is provided for those purposes; acquiring them is up to individual participants.

Stipend/Salary/Other

The PLSI provides a modest living allowance when funds permit. The amount of the allowance when it is provided depends on the number of qualified participants who are admitted (a maximum of 36) but not funded by their tribes, and the amount of funds actually received to administer the Institute. If your tribe is unable to fund you, we have received private donations from the Law School Admissions Council and several law firms with which we can assist you.

Dates

June 5, 2011-July 7, 2011

Eligibility Criteria

- This program “targets students from racial/ethnic groups that are significantly underrepresented in science in the United States, e.g. African American, Latino/a, Native American, and Pacific Island students. All students who are members of these groups, or who are interested in broadening participation in political science by students from underrepresented minority populations and pursuing scholarship on issues affecting under-represented groups, are eligible to apply.”
- Must be U.S. citizens
- Currently completing junior year of undergraduate study , with a major in Political Science or a related discipline
- Have an interest in attending graduate school in political science

Description

The institute's objective is to introduce students and encourage applications to graduate and Ph.D. programs in political science and related subjects. The five-week program includes two transferable credits, one in quantitative analysis and the other in race and American politics. The interdisciplinary summer institute also includes visits and lectures from prominent speakers, as well as ongoing assistance to help students preparing to take the Graduate Record Examination (GRE). The main emphasis of the program, however, is to fully equip students with the necessary tools they need to enroll in a graduate program. Students also prepare original research papers, and some students may present their research at the APSA Annual Meeting (expenses paid by APSA). This program includes a graduate fair during which PhD programs in Political Science representatives from around the country.

Southeast Asian Studies Summer Institute (SEASSI)– Heritage Language Program & Awards

Sponsor

University of Wisconsin-Madison; Henry Luce Foundation

Website

<http://seassi.wisc.edu/>

Location

Madison, WISCONSIN

Dates

June 13, 2011 to Friday, August 5, 2011

Eligibility Criteria

Note: The SEASSI language program itself is not limited to individuals of Hmong, Cambodian, Filipino, and Lao heritage, but the Heritage Program and the Heritage Language Awards are.

- For the Heritage Program and Heritage Language Fellowship, students must be American undergraduates who are Hmong-American, Lao-American, Vietnamese-American, Filipino-American or Cambodian-American, and who are dedicated to learning the languages of their heritage.
- Commitment to a career related to Southeast Asia and involving the use of the language studied

Description

This program is an intensive summer language institute for those who wish to study Southeast Asian languages, including Hmong, Khmer, Vietnamese, Filipino and Lao. This particular program is focused on assisting students who are in learning the language of their heritage. According to the sponsors, “One of the most important tools you're going to need in order to take such a look at your culture is literacy in your native language. Therefore, that's what you'll spend most of your time on in class in our program. Our instructors, with the sophistication and global perspective you'd expect in a university environment, will help you learn to use basic tools like literacy to function in the traditional (and changing) world of your culture. We'll help you answer your own questions about your culture, and plot your own path, so that you can better understand where you come from, where you're going, and how to best get there.” Because only five fellowships can be awarded through this heritage fellowship program, applicants are urged to also apply for FLAS and Tuition fellowships (see website for more information). The languages taught at SEASSI include Thai, Burmese, Javanese and Indonesian in addition to Khmer, Filipino, Hmong, Lao and Vietnamese.

Housing

No housing provided.

Stipend/Salary

“small living stipend” + full SEASSI tuition (tuition is valued at $3,000 in 2008).

Eligibility Criteria

There is an extensive list of eligibility criteria.

See website for list http://www.rackham.umich.edu/prospective\_students/srop/eligibility\_requirements/

Description

This program provides qualified students with the opportunities to work with University of Michigan faculty in an intensive research setting. Students work with a mentor, as part of a research team that may also include graduate students, other researchers and other SROP students. The main objective of this program is to give undergraduate students interested in pursuing advanced degrees the chance to experience and acquire the skills and experience needed to prepare for graduate studies. Students choose from the wide array of fields covered at the University of Michigan (indicating a specific area of interest in their application) to conduct their research, attend workshops and seminars, a GRE preparatory session, the SROP/CIC conference in July and present a final paper/poster at a SROP symposium at the end of the program.

Housing

Provided by the sponsor in university residence (note: "food expenses will be the partial responsibility of the student").

Stipend/Salary

$4,000 stipend + round-trip transportation + GRE preparatory course + fee waiver to apply to a Rackham Graduate School doctoral program

Deadline Date

Received by February 14th, 2011

Sponsor

University of California, San Diego

Website

<http://ogs.ucsd.edu/student-affairs/summer-research/stars/index.html>

Location

San Diego, CALIFORNIA

Dates

8 weeks in the summer.

Eligibility Criteria

Students in the STARS program are funded by several sources, each which has specific eligibility criteria. See the program website for details.

Description

STARS offer exciting research opportunities students in the sciences (physical, life, marine and ocean), engineering, and math. (See the website for a list of all the eligible research areas.) The goal of the program is to increase the numbers of underrepresented students in doctoral programs in these fields. Students acquire research experience by working with faculty mentors on their ongoing research projects. In addition, participants attend scientific lectures on topics science, engineering and math, graduate school preparation workshops in addition to a GRE prep course. Students also present their research at the UCSD Summer Research Conference and produce a 10-15 page scientific paper.

Note: Resources on program website include a comprehensive FAQ page and a housing handbook.

Location

Washington, D.C. or other locations (not all opportunities are available at all locations)

Dates

June 6th - August 12th 2011

Eligibility Criteria

- Be “currently enrolled in degree-granting programs of study at accredited U.S. institutions of higher education recognized by the U.S. Department of Education. (See U.S. Department of Education's accreditation database to verify your school and/or program of study)” in any major
- Be a U.S. citizen.
- Be an entering junior or senior year in the fall of 2011 or will have completed "first year" of school if attending a Tribal College. Students who will graduate during the spring or summer semester of 2011 are not eligible for this program, unless they have been accepted to a graduate program or institution of higher education
- Interest in pursuing a transportation-related career
- Priority given to students with a cumulative and/or major GPA of 3.0 or higher (on a 4.0 scale)
- “STIPDG is open to all qualified applicants but is designed to provide qualified women, persons with disabilities, and members of diverse groups with summer opportunities in transportation where these groups have been under represented”

Description

This program is stimulated by the Department of Transportation’s effort to promote more representation of women, persons with disabilities, and members of diverse groups into transportation careers where these groups are underrepresented. Opportunities for this program are available in fields such as: engineering, planning, economics, transportation management, environmental issues, hazardous materials, aviation, business, public administration, management information systems, law and criminal justice. Students are placed within agencies that best meet their interests. Project assignments vary based on availability and location. Overall, this internship program offers students a mix of field trips/on-site visits, work experience with DOT agencies and transportation-related research experience.

Note: Extensive FAQs available on website.

Housing/ Room & Board?

Miami University's Department of Mathematics and Statistics

Website

<http://www.units.muohio.edu/sumsri/>

Location

Oxford, OHIO

Dates

June 6 to July 22, 2011

Eligibility Criteria

- “The ideal candidate will have completed the calculus series and at least one proof-based mathematics or statistics course with distinction; interest in pursuing advanced degrees in mathematical sciences
- Because of the shortage of minorities and women mathematical scientists, we are especially interested in, but not limited to, African Americans and other underrepresented minorities and women”
- Be entering junior or senior year in home institution after completion of the program
- Must be U.S. citizen or permanent resident

Description

During this program, participating students participate in problem seminars in mathematics, statistics, or computer science. Altogether, the program will also include a technical writing seminar, a GRE preparation workshop, and two short courses on algebra and real analysis, and colloquium talks given by well know mathematical scientists. In addition, panel discussions allow for an exchange of ideas and for the presentation of information on graduate school and further opportunities in the mathematical sciences. Through the many components, it strives to better prepare these students for graduate studies by giving them important writing, research, group work and presentation skills, as well as preparation for the GRE and the graduate school application. Interested applicants can download copies of the journal of previous SUMSRI research papers, from 1999-2008 at <http://www.users.muohio.edu/porterbm/sumj/Journal.html>

Summer Venture in Management Program (SVMP)

Sponsor

Harvard University School of Business

Website

<http://www.hbs.edu/mba/svmp/index.html>

Location

Cambridge, MASSACHUSETTS

Dates

June 18 - 24, 2011

Eligibility Criteria

- must be current college student who will complete junior year in college by June 2011
- must be U.S. citizen or permanent resident
- business major not required
- SVMP participants must be employed in a summer internship for summer 2011 and be nominated by and have sponsorship from their company or organization to attend. Sponsoring organizations can include public or private companies, government agencies or entities, and non-profit organizations.”
- “Consistent with the objective of promoting educational diversity and opportunity in business leadership, additional criteria to be considered among others, are whether the applicant is: the first family member to attend college; a member of a group that is currently underrepresented in business schools and corporate America (e.g. African American, Latino, Native American, Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, or Transgender); and/or from a family with little business education or experience; from a school whose graduates do not typically attend a top-tier university (e.g., attends a predominantly minority college, or attends a community college as part of a four-year degree).”

Description

SVMP is a twenty-year traditional sponsored by Harvard Business School (HBS). It consists of a 1-week program “designed to expose high-potential college students, who may not have otherwise considered an MBA degree, to the study of business administration in general, and to the MBA Program at HBS in particular. This unique educational experience, which combines a week of study at HBS with a summer internship at a company or organization, gives participants a broader understanding of the challenges business leaders face, the innumerable opportunities that exist in business, and the impact they can have on their community and the world through business leadership.” During SVMP, students are exposed to the typical experience of HBS MBA students and receive first-hand experience in the case method to learn about and discuss issues in management.

Housing/ Room & Board?

Housing, meals, tuition provided during the week.

Stipend/Salary/Other

“Given the current economic climate, finding a summer internship is going to be challenging. We strongly recommend that you start looking today”.

Dates

May 23 - July 29, 2011

Eligibility Criteria

- U.S. citizen or Permanent Resident
- Strong academic background with courses in biology, mathematics, psychology, and if possible, neuroscience
- Have completed at least one course in neuroscience
- Minimum GPA of 3.0
- Must be completing sophomore or junior year (at time of application)
- “Applicants from any institution will be considered. Priority will be given to minority students and women from small colleges with limited research opportunities.”

Description

Students, matched with NYU faculty, graduate students or postdoctoral fellows, work on individual projects in Neural Science laboratories based on ongoing research at the Center. Students in this program are matched in accordance with their background preparation and areas of interest. Students are involved in all aspects of the research process, “from experimental design to data analysis and communication of results”. In addition to hands-on research, the students in this program also meet for neuroscience seminars and presentations with faculty and graduate students doing research at the NYU Washington Square Campus and as well as the NYU Medical School. All participants each give a presentation of their research, writer and abstract and a journal-style, as well as a 20-minute oral presentation at a summer research conference.

- Be a citizen of the United States or permanent resident of the National of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Island or Commonwealth of the Northern Marianna Islands, or a lawful permanent resident of the United States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands or Guam”

Description

All of these three programs possess a core curriculum, made up of two components – Academic Study Strategy Development and Field Experience. These are then adapted for each program, such that:

- ESP I is for college students who have completed general biology and chemistry and are at least 2 years away from applying to veterinary school. Students here obtain a greater understanding of the field through “Animal Exposure” and coursework in basic science.
- ESP II is for students who plan to apply to veterinary school within the next academic year and want to learn more about careers in the profession. It includes workshops on veterinary medical school applications/admissions and MCAT/GRE prep sessions.
- ESP III is designed for “current applicants for a professional veterinary medicine program and students who have been accepted” and incorporates a Simulated Veterinary Curriculum.

Note: ESP II and III participants also complete a course in “Comparative Veterinary Physiology” and experience “Veterinary Clinical Exposure”.
